PEACE IN THE FAMILY

By KEITH KENYON.

Henry Harper put back his well-shaped head and laughed. "Well, I like that! Do you know I'm only forty-three? But I suppose that must seem ancient to twenty."

Dora loved her father devotedly. There was something in his tone that brought a flood of red to her cheeks. "Well, not exactly ancient, daddy, but when I get married I want some one my own age who can play golf and tennis and dance and run an aeroplane, maybe, if he's rich."

"An all-around athlete like yourself! So you think because I like books and a garden and write for magazines I'm old and decrepit?"

"Now, daddy!" "It sounds pretty much that way, miss. But if you liked books and flowers better than anything else wouldn't you like your husband to like them, too, no matter what his age might be?" anxiously.

"I suppose so," with a sigh. "But, daddy dear, if she's accepted you—and you seem pretty sure of it or you'd have been more anxious about the letter—please don't tell me. I'll know that silence means consent. And maybe some day—I mean I'll try to get used to it." She kissed him and went quickly back to the house to sob her heart out in her room.

The days passed and Henry Harper never returned to the subject they had discussed that morning in the garden. Dora drooped, knowing that her father was to be married and that another woman would soon be pouring coffee at her place at the table.

Her friends, little guessing the trouble, did what they could to cheer her. Her father was worried. "Dora," he said one morning with finality, "I have a plan. I'm going to send you away. You need a change of scene and air. If you go on this way I don't know what will happen. You've got to go. I've made up my mind!"

"But, daddy, promise you won't—"

He guessed the appeal in her eyes. "No, dear!" softly. "I won't be married while you're gone. I know of a place on the north shore of Massachusetts, Broxton, where a number of people have cottages. Some friends of your mother live there—two in fact, a Mr. Cyrus Fielding, bachelor, and his sister Margaret. They have always wanted us to visit them, but I can't go just now. So I'm going to send you alone. There! That's a good girl. I knew you'd do it. I'll give you a check for some clothes and try to be ready by Saturday."

The Fieldings were at the station with their car when Dora arrived at Broxton Saturday evening. Margaret was clear skinned, dark eyed and quiet mannered, and her tender greeting of the girl won her at once. Cyrus, tall and not too good looking, put Dora instantly at her ease by remarking, "How do you do, Miss Harper?" The last time I saw you you were cutting your first teeth. Someone suggested that I investigate, and you bit me. I still have the scar."

Dora laughed. "I have always wondered why my teeth tried to grow crooked. I understand now. They got wrecked in infancy."

"Very likely you are right," agreed Margaret Fielding, looking at her brother fondly. "He's as hard as nails all over. And no wonder—he's never in the house."

"That sounds promising," returned Dora. "If you mean he's fond of sport."

"Try me on anything you like!" boasted Cyrus. "But here we are at home."

The cottage was low, rambling and luxurious with every comfort. Surrounding it was a most wonderful garden. "Oh, if father could only see it!" exclaimed Dora. "He loves flowers so!"

"I wish he could!" answered Margaret. "The garden is mine. I take care of it myself. Now, dearie, I want you to feel that this is your home. Do just whatever you wish. I'll see that you meet some charming people and Cyrus would love to have you along on all his jaunts, boating or otherwise, if you don't think he's too old."

"You're both darlings," exclaimed Dora enthusiastically. "It's my own fault if I don't have the time of my life." For the time she had forgotten about her father and her trouble.

The days and weeks flew. The roses of health and spirits again bloomed on Dora's cheeks—and something else! For she had fallen in love with Cyrus Fielding and he with her. "But, dear, you are sure you don't think I am too old," he asked her once anxiously. "I'm forty."

"Oh, hush! I won't have you say that," she laughed. "You're just right."

One day Dora came into the library, where Margaret was reading. On the table was a bowl of roses that caught her eye. "Why, those are Lady Thorn roses! I thought father was the only one in this part of the country who had them!"

"He is!" answered Margaret, putting her arms tenderly around Dora and drawing her close. "He sent them to me. Do you like me any better, dear, than you did?"

"You darling!" exclaimed Dora. "So you are to be my new mother? Oh, I'm so glad! Now I've two things to tell daddy in my letter."
